Die Ausgabe ist insbesondere für das Zentralabitur 2014 in NRW geeignet! Cicero verteidigt im Jahr 56 v.Chr. Publius Sestius, den Volkstribun des vergangenen Jahres. Die Rede ist jedoch keine klassische Verteidigungsrede – Cicero nutzt stattdessen seinen Auftritt vor Gericht, um ausführlich auf die jüngere politische Entwicklung und seine eigene Rolle dabei einzugehen. Er plädiert leidenschaftlich für die Erhaltung der Republik. Die Lektüreausgabe enthält ausgewählte, zentrale Ausschnitte aus der Rede, ergänzt um einige theoretische Passagen zur Rhetorik aus De oratore.

In the In Vatinius, the question of the responsibility of Caesar as consul for the irregularities committed by Vatinius during his tribunate calls for some consideration of Cicero's feelings towards Caesar as expressed in the speeches delivered after his return from exile.

Anthony Corbeill maintains that political abuse exercised real powers of persuasion over Roman audiences and he demonstrates how public humor both creates and enforces a society's norms. Previous scholarship has offered two explanations for why abusive language proliferated in Roman oratory. The first asserts that public rhetoric, filled with extravagant lies, was unconstrained by strictures of propriety. The second contends that invective represents an artifice borrowed from the Greeks. After a fresh reading of all extant literary works from the period, Corbeill concludes that the topics exploited in political invective arise from biases already present in Roman society. The author assesses evidence outside political discourse—from prayer ritual to philosophical speculation to physiognomic texts—in order to locate independently the biases in Roman society that enabled an orator's jokes to persuade. Within each instance of abusive humor—a name pun, for example, or the mockery of a physical deformity—resided values and preconceptions that were essential to the way a Roman citizen of the Late Republic defined himself in relation to his community.
